The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. hat It there. Allow no one to deceive you in this.

Mr

ashi

in th

has r

State

to w

is gi

ciari

of 11

at M

a m

1891

six y

1907

orar

the

he is the

Hur

ano

zati

by I

nigh

Lou

Th

neg acco

bres

jerk

erec

who

cam

V

ing

tion

able

con

All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children-Experience against Experiment.

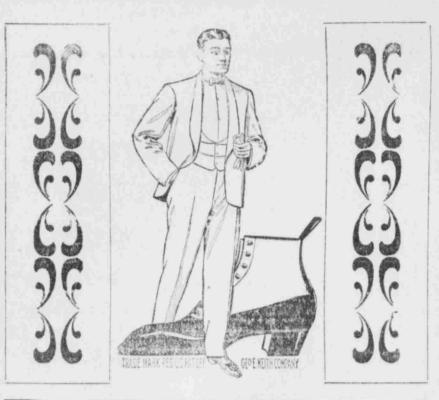

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Scothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea-The Mother's Friend.

WALK-OVER SHOES FOR MEN

SHOES FOR EVERY OCCASION

No matter what you wish them for, an afternoon of sport, an evening of society, or for business, there is an appropriate and reliable WALK-OVER shoe for that particular occasion. WALK-OVER shoes are shoes of the hour and for every hour of the day. Thousands of people know it; do you?

$3.50, $4.00, $4.50, $5.00.

J. T. WALL & COMPANY.

A Useful Remedy. Little Jamie, aged three, was playing with his little friend, Jack. At the was the first sun cook. He began in | The planter glowered suspicionstrat time Jamie chanced to have a rather | 1687 to boil water, and in 1688 he had | them. heavy cold and was sneezing quite very good success in boiling eggs. often. Jack's mother heard him sev- Sir John Herschel and Buffon are otheral times and sympathetically asked: | er famous names associated with sun Why, Jamie, what a cold you have! Doesn't your mother give you any- boiling by sunlight instead of coal or thing for it?" "Yes ma'am," Jamie gas-has been going on for three hunvery respectfully answered, "She gives dred years. There are sun stoves me a clean handkerohief," whereupon that roast a sirloin or boil a soup to be produced the prescribed "remedy." perfection. They are only used, bow--Delineator.

Sun Cooking.

A German, Baron Tehernhausen, you well. cooking. Sun cooking-roasting and ever, by scientists.

Novelized by Porter Emerson

and Harry Leon Wilson

Copyright, 1910, by American Press

tion, for it meant the taking of the girl through the lines of the distant military camp and the procuring of

From the Play of the Same Name by Booth Tarkington shelter of some sort for her there. Browne The door finally opened. Gilbert awaited tensely the answer. The planter again appeared. "Come on in," he snapped. "Come in and explain to my wife, and if you can satisfy her that you're all right you can leave the young person here for the night." With a sigh of relief at the glimmer within miles!

THIS YOUNG LADY IS FAR FROM HOME. WILL YOU KEEP HER HERE UNTIL MORNING?"

vening star. It has risen in the sky of hope held out to him Gilbert had and overshadows all else in the heav- carried his charge across the thresh as, and that is the way you have and into the living room of the plant isen in my life to outshine everything er's house. else, to guide me in the way I should ! go. You are my evening star, and as ed into the woods in search of will well you are my morning star, and"- ittle body, and, holding her close to his breast, he started along the winding pathway. One of her arms he ben around his neck. Her ringlets of gold en hair fell against his cheek as la walked. Her bosom gently rose and fell as she dreamed herself away into the magic realms of fairyland, with her gallant fairy prince, Gilbert Steele as her protector and guide. As he ooked down into her innocent face and understood in his way the un fathomable depth of the trust she had placed in him and in his honor Gilber Steele vowed a vow with himself are with his God that he would hold so cred this trust and strive manfully t justify it, as was the duty of a truman and a soldier in Andrew Jack son's army. Passed almost an hour ere Gilbert Steele reached with his precious bur den the house of a plantation manager whom he was certain would be able and willing to provide shelter for the girl for the night.

Throaty baying of dun coated hounds sent Gilbert, startled, aback as he drew near the dwelling, and the g | sleeping girl, with a cry of terror. lurched dazedly from his arms. The planter, aroused by the disturbance appeared in the doorway, his figure silhouetted boldly in the glare of yellow light that streamed forth into the darkness. He carried a musket, in readiness for immediate action. These were dangerous times, and night prowlers were usually bent on ques tionable errands.

"Stand back or I'll fire," he cried threateningly, leveling the weapon at the figure of the man his eyes dimit

But no sooner had he spoken than the householder lowered the gun, for much to his amazement, he beheld coming into the path of light a young man whose face was familiar to nigr and resting on his arm was a pate faced, wan eyed young girl, whose dainty raiment of white was torn through contact with briers and stain ed here and there with dirt marks,

"This young lady is far from home announced Gilbert, "lost her way. needs food and rest. Will you keep her here until morning? I will pay

"I will have to ask my wife," was his reply as he drew back into the house, slammed the door and left the travel worn couple standing disconsolately in the blackness of the night.

The girl clung to Gilbert in nervous fear of the dogs, which, however, were leashed in a woodshed near by comforted her, though he also was

He explained that the girl had stray flowers, had lost her way, that he has He looked down into her eyes and fortunately come across her and had aw that they had closed in contented | guided her to the planter's house, from whence she could return home in the morning.

> the distance was very great and be was compelled to join his soldier comrades or else prove disobedient to his superior officer-something he would under no circumstances do.

> The planter's mate surveyed them both with keenly penetrating eyes Perhaps she guessed that the handsome soldier lad had not told her all of his story or very much of the truth of the situation.

> Perhaps she knew that the bewildered gaze of the wearied young girl as she listened to her companion's story revealed it to be a pure and, so far as she was concerned, an entirely unnecessary fabrication.

> Perhaps the kindly woman knew intuitively that before her were two hearts that throbbed solely for one another, and she questioned not the

She gave them food and drink, and when it came time for the soldier to face the long tramp to his camp she withdrew quietly from the room, leav ing them to bid each other farewell.

"Do not leave me; do not go," the girl pleaded with Gilbert. "You must never be away from me again, and"her voice quavered-"they will shoot you-you will be killed."

Her eyes filled with tears as she clung to him.

"No, no; it is a soldier's duty to brave unflinchingly whatever danger may occur. My country has called me, and I must respond. Besides, dear one, there is no danger. Those redcoats don't know the country. The stand up in line in the open, while we shoot them from behind trees and from ditches where we lie concealed." She shuddered at his description of the horrible thing which she vaguely understood to be war. A strange, terrified look came into her eyes.

"You say what is not so," she fluttereda "There is danger. You will be killed. I feel it; I know it. I can see you now"-her eyes closed, and she clutched his arm with both her tiny hands-"I can see you now lying be side a rock; there is a hole in your forehead; there is blood on your face Gilbert, and lying all around you are men whose arms and legs are gone. She reeled away from him and sway ed backward. He sprang to her and saved her from falling. "Yes," she went on prophetically her voice rising-"yes, Gilbert-my Gilbert-and I can see the man who killed you. There he is crouching over there." She pointed hysterically before her. "He is laughing and loading his gun, and his face-oh, his face is the face of Raoul de Valette!" As she cried out these last words ker voice broke into a despairing wail.

d she fell forward limply in her over's arms. She was unconscious.

Suppose the planter's wife would not The planter and his wife personded to the lad's frantic calls, and they low musketeers take Madeleine in! What was to be to the lad's frantic calls, and they done then? Not another dwelling carried the precious form up into a bedroom, where the woman applied restoratives. When Madeleine finally There would be only one resource, and that was practically no resource word was sent to the anxious soldier at all, was probably out of the ques-waiting below. "You had better go now. She is all right," advised the planter. "She will be taken home in the morning. If you go near her again she will only faint again, so my old woman says."

Gilbert Steele took up his hat and. ness, plunged desperately out into the

A vague, intangible sense of impendmanfully, but it would not down. The girl's words, her manner, her closed eucs that saw as she warned him of his | with Gilbert, but his good points were fate, made bim tremble for the mor-

Yet for the first time in his life he was possessed by physical fear. In his elementary young life he had not been accustomed to analyzing his feelings or his emotions. Events had come too quickly to permit him to discover that there was such a form of self examination as psychology. Had he known something about this introspective as well as projective science he would have been able to comfort himself with the reflection that both their feet and their clothing. the unnerving fear that threatened to In the first place they skin the hare, the overwrought and temporarily distracted mind of the girl he loved.

But to Gilbert Steele, stumbling through the abysmal pitch of the night, the closed eyes that saw had boots (in their language called kapenetrated into the hidden world of the things that were to be, and try as fat cleaned off, a wooden frame he would be could not shut out from made about a foot on the round his own vision the crouching body larger than the skin, and the skin is that reloaded a gun and the face that then laced tightly around a frame hughed-the face of Raoul de Valette!

HE American soldiery were rallying to the defense of the beautiful Crescent City, and for weeks the surrounding snow owt. country presented scenes of unparalleled military activity.

The meager troops of the defenders were gradually re-enforced by the operations of the recruiting forces, which were sometimes ruthless in their manner of "persuading" men to join the army. And there was need of mengrave need.

and braved the terrors of continental campaigns under Wellington-men of brawn and skill and courage, who side by side with the bearded Prussians, had shattered the Old Guard of Napo-Jeon at Waterloo.

muffins; surely this rawboned American rebel, with his combined force of only 5,800 soldiers, most of whom were but half trained, had no hope of prevailing against the flower of the British army. Thus reasoned Sir Edward Pakenham and his staff of gilded advisers, little remembering that those men are twice armed who war for home, for country and for right. The closing days of the war of 1812 were momentous ones for the Ameriher briefly tolerated "right" to search American ships for supposed subjects in the ranks of the seamen and prevented from perpetrating other gross injustices on Americans and American gain the prestige which Yankee brav- thing." ery had so sorely shattered on the high seas. And it was in the general neighborhood of New Orleans that was to be struck a decisive blow to demonstrate the superior force of the one time mother country. But when a nation produces Gilbert Steeles to wage its wars in the ranks, throwing their lives in the balance. risking life and love for the stars and stripes that wave above them, then indeed must invaders look sharply to their muskets and their saber edges and learn to weigh opponents in a scale giving a record that does not lie.

Dawn, following the night when Gilbert Steele left Madeleine de Valette at the planter's house, found him stretched in troubled sleep on the ground in the camp with his mates. As yet the hastily mustered detachment to which he belonged had not been able to secure tents for any save the officers, for the infant nation was but ill supplied with funds to provide necessities for its defenders.

Shortly after the first streaks of morning light painted the eastern sky the rows of sleeping men unwound for several minutes. themselves stiffly from their blankets. gathered the rolled coats which had served as pillows and proceeded to fall would be served to them for breakfast. The day had come, and over Gilbert Steele there stole thoughts-thoughts of Madeleine de Valette- which subdued his ordinarily gay spirits and caused his comrades to survey him in wonder and regret.

thing wrong with him, sure," was the comment bandled about among his fel-

True, he had been sharply reprimanded by the captain for his delinquency of the day before. He had opened her eyes and looked about her promised Wolf, back in the forest, up the river, that he would not delay if given permission to stop a few mo ments to talk with a young lady. He had failed to keep his promise to the letter, for he had not caught up with the squad of backwoodsmen under Wolf's command when they reached their boats at the river's edge.

They had waited and hallooed for with a heart overwhelmed with sad- him. He did not appear and had been compelled to walk the entire way to the camp, arriving after midnight, thus tiring him for the work of the ing doom smote him. He fought it off day in which every onnce of energy he could command would be required.

Yes, the captain had been angry so well known that he was not penalized in any way. Therefore the lad's Gilbert Steele was not a coward. associates were certain that this sub-

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

ESKIMO FOOTWEAR.

Boots of the Arctic Regions and How They Are Made.

The Eskimos, as a rule, use nothing but the sealskin, deerskin, musk oxen, arctic hare and bird skins for master him was solely the result of clean and dry it and chew it all over, and when it is thoroughly dry they cut it up and make socks to wear inside of their seal or deer skin maks). The sealskin is taken, the and kept in the sun until thorough-

> Then the squaws or women clean and, set about cutting it up into boots, which are generally made about two or three sizes too large. The bottom, or sole, is cut to the shape of the foot in one piece, the uppers are joined and sewed to the edge of the bottom, and the fore part is sewed to the leg nearly straight across the instep. The leg is ent out according to the length wanted, with a receiving string in the top to tie over, thus keeping the

The arctic Eskimos do not use bark or tan of any kind for their skins. It cannot be procured, and they do not know how to use Should their boots dry up their la dies, or squaws, take them and chew them all over, and in ten minutes they are as soft as a glove. *Farther The commander of the British forces, south and in some parts of Labra-Sir Edward Pakenham, had in his dor the skins are barked and thorforces the picked veterans of foreign oughly dried and when made up last wars, 10,000 of them in all-men who much longer. It makes a good deal of difference what species or sear are used. The best by far are the square flipper and the old harp seal. Could they get leather and soles for their boots as we do in this country Surely this proud array would make it would be an improvement for brief work of Andy Jackson's raga- summer wear, but would not answer for winter.

A good pair of skin boots will last an Eskimo for nearly six months with constant wear on the ice .-Captain Moses Bartlett in Superintendent and Foreman.

He Didn't Ask.

He is a small boy who likes to have the things that he wants, and he is diplomatic in getting them. can people. Proud Britain, shorn of The other day he had gone out to make a call with his mamma upon an old friend.

"Now, dear," said mamma as they stood on the doorstep, "remember property, was battling on land to re- that you are not to ask for any-

"Yes, mamma," answered the small boy.

"I have been busy almost all the morning making crullers," said the friend as she entered the room and greeted them. A beatific expression spread over the small boy's face.

"I like to hear you talk about crullers," he said, with a smile of more than childlike innocence. "Why, are you fond of them?"

asked the mamma's friend in a pleased tone.

"Oh, yes, very," said the small boy, looking if anything still more

"I didn't ask for them, mamma," he cried in a tone of indignant protest as the door closed on the cruller maker, who had gone to bring in a sample.

How He Knew.

In an assault and battery case tried in a Cleveland court the prosecuting witness testified at length a bugle sounded, followed by the rat-a- that the defendant had knocked him tat-tat-tat-tat of a drum-reveille-and senseless and had then kicked him

"If this man's attack rendered you unconscious," demanded the in line before the crudely constructed magistrate, "how is it that you know cook shack, where coffee and beans he kicked you when you were

> This question seemed to floor the witness. He was lost in reflection for some moments; then, brightening, he replied:

"I know it, your honor, because The day of the big fight and Gilbert, that's what I would have done to him if I'd got him down."-Circle